

More equal societies work better for everyone

Are you proud to be a Kiwi? Of course you are! New Zealand has been a great place to live, work and bring up children.

But we now have some of the highest levels of social problems in the developed world – drug and alcohol addiction, mental illness, imprisonment, obesity, teenage pregnancies, infant mortality.

We also have one of the higher income gaps. And research has clearly shown that high income gaps produce worse social problems.

The aim of the Closing the Gap Project is to raise public awareness of the benefits of a more equal society, to such a level that our leaders take notice and take action.

Please help us by getting information about the issue from our website. There you'll find research articles, opinion pieces and a summary of the major research into income inequality contained in the book, The Spirit Level.

www.closingthegap.org.nz

Organised by Income Equality Aotearoa New Zealand